Policy Research Institute on Ageing and Ethnicity

DVD

Progressing Policy with Passion

PRIAE launched its film narrated by Jon Snow (Channel 4 News Journalist) at the largest Conference to be held involving London's black and minority ethnic elders through its dedicated network on Policy called, ME²PN Minority Ethnic Elders' Policy Network "PRIAE makes the case that in old age being a minority should not be a disadvantage. Ageing with dignity, respect and quality of life is a goal to be achieved for all elders, everywhere, tomorrow and today." - as narrated by Jon Snow, Channel 4, UK

Playing our Part after 50

This BAFTA launched film is to show the contribution of black and minority ethnic elders in different walks of life and to use it as an example to encourage others to keep physically and mentally active as well as that helping, contributing and volunteering matters. "Do not ask what society can do for you, but what you can do for society is the message that the 'ethnic elders' interviewed in this film unfailingly convey ... it is a gift which we dare not accept lightly."

- A Sivanandan,
Institute of Race Relations.

Dementia Matters, Ethnic Concerns

This first European film on dementia covering UK, Netherlands, Finland and Spain is to raise awareness of the condition while acting as an important communication tool. It was produced as a result of extensive research about how dementia affects minority ethnic communities.

"We can all play our part in supporting the direction the Policy Research Institute on Ageing and Ethnicity has set to help improve dementia care to minority ethnic older people. As my colleague Paul Boateng advises in the film, care for people with dementia needs to be based on dignity and respect with full regard for their well being." - Rt Hon John Hutton MP, Former Minister of State, Department of Health, UK

PRIAE Conference on Ageing and Ethnicity

A conference film report, POLICY AND PRACTICE IN AGEING in London, was to engage minority ethnic elders and their age voluntary organisations with policymakers on key issues concerning income, health, housing, poverty and employment; and to stimulate elders further to engage in the process of helping to shape the policies that affect them through the ME²PN "Information is key and that's why PRIAE is key. What PRIAE does in an exemplary way is drawing together what is right." - Professor Antony Sheehan, Former Director General for Health and Care Partnerships, Department of Health
